How to Make Pearl Drop Earrings

Step 1: Making the pearl beads dangle

I used freshwater pearl bead to make these blue pearl earrings DIY. The pearls are naturally not consistent in shape. While they are all approximately the same size, the shapes are not exactly consistent.

When using these sort of inconsistently shaped beads, it is important to choose the ones that are of the closest same shape for both sides of the earrings. This will ensure you earrings look the same on both side.

For these earrings, I had 2 blue pearls on each side. I choose a slightly teardrop shaped beads for the bottom pearl and a more rounded shaped beads for the top ones.

1. To make the dangle, insert the gold headpin into the teardrop shaped blue pearl bead from the wider end of the pearl.
2. Next, add a gold filler bead.
3. Follow with the more rounded blue pearl bead.
4. And top it with another gold filler bead.

Step 2: Attaching the pearl dangle onto the lever back earring hoop.

1. Using the round nose plier, form a loop at the top of the pearl dangle with the excess head pin wire, but do not close the loop completely. Leave a small gap to insert the lever back hoop.
2. Finally, insert the lever back hoop and using the round nose pliers, close the gap in the wire loop.

Repeat the same steps to make the other side of the earring to complete the handmade blue pearl earrings DIY.
